

Atkins Library

Atkins Library contains 11 stories of much more than just books. Here you'll find a variety of study rooms, classrooms, resources centers, help desks, the newest technologies, and even a coffee shop. We house a number of satellite locations for various campus services, such as the University Writing Center and OneIT services.

Currently enrolled UNC Charlotte students may borrow PC and Mac laptops on a first come, first served basis at the Information and Research Desk located on the first floor of Atkins Library near the main entrance

Get help from librarians on a wide range of topics including copyright, instruction to support your curriculum, or how to best approach a class assignment.

You can Request a research consultation, and make an appointment with a subject librarian in Connect for research support.

Area 49 is the library's collection of innovation and creation spaces designed to give the campus community space to engage with ideas using technology, making, and creativity. You can:

- Play a game
- Make something
- Record a video
- Record a podcast and more!

Special Collections & University Archives is where you can find unique materials like rare books, archives, and oral history interviews.

Get help finding books and other resources, exploring online databases and online collections, refining your research topic and keywords, citing your sources, and more.